Mariposa Has Stormy Trip

The big liner Mariposa went south early this morning and report having had a very stormy trip all the way north and back. While going to the dock at Ellimar she struck a rock at high tide and her fuel oil had to be pumped into the bay in order to float her. The ship's bottom is thought to be in bad condition from the bump and she will go on the drydock as soon as she arrives in Seattle, which will probably delay her sailing date.

The Mariposa took five boxes of fresh fish south this morning.

Portland Steamers Sailing Dates

Portland's first vessel to carry a cargo as an entering wedge for the jobbers of that city in the Alaska trade will be the steamer Thos. L. Wand, which sailed last Tuesday, March 3. She will be followed March 10 by the steamer J. B. Stetson and March 18 by the Quinault. The Stetson carries 44 passengers and the Quinault 17 passengers. The Thos. L. Wand is not used in the passenger trade but will start the schedule with freight.

While the steamers will not get away on a permanent schedule with their first sailing, it is intended thereafter to dispatch one every seven days.

The Wand has been operated between San Francisco and Eureka. Olson & Mahony are her owners. She is one of the best-known vessels in the Coast trade and was launched in 1906 at Aberdeen, Wn. She is of 413 tons net register, has a length of 174 feet, beam of 38 feet and depth of hold of 12.3 ft.

The J. B. Stetson was formerly in the Hicks-Hauptman fleet and is now operated by the Charles R. McCormack interests. The vessel took the water at Winslow, Wash. in 1915. She has a net registered tonnage of 521 and is 181 ft. long, with a beam of 39.4 feet and depth of hold 13.4 feet.

The Quinault, owned by the Hardwood Lumber Company, was turned out at Aberdeen the same year as the Wand and is of 426 tons register. Her length is 160 feet, beam 38 feet and depth of hold 12.1 feet.

EDITORIAL

FATHER DUNCAN

It is not the satisfaction of feeling in such large measure of feeling that life has been well spent as has Father Duncan of Metlakatla, Alaska. The following Editorial is from the Oregon Journal:

It is reported that William Duncan, head of the Simpshean Indian Colony, Metlakatla, in Southern Alaska is to retire from the active management of the colony's affairs on account of age.

In all the history of missionary endeavor in the world there is no real achievement than that of "Father" Duncan, who brought a Indian community out of darkness of savagery into the light of civilization under trials that would have wrecked lesser accomplishments. Not only did he have to struggle against barbaric customs but he also to contend against the "hellish" practices of depraved whites. What he did could only have been done by a man with an iron will, rare executive capacity and complete consecration to a life long ideal.

It is not the purpose at this time to attempt a panegyric of Father Duncan but only to point out the romance and the lesson taught in the story of the circumstances under which he undertook his life work.

A chaplain on a British man of war which visited the British Columbia and Alaska coast in the late fifties was so impressed with the benighted conditions that prevailed among the Indians that on his return to England he preached a crusade. He came one day to a small town and arranged with a local minister for a meeting in a church at night. The night was a stormy one and the minister tried to have it postponed. The chaplain declared that he had a God-given mission and that he would tell his story even though he had no auditors. The hour for the meeting arrived and there was no one in the church except the minister and the chaplain. The storm grew in intensity. A peal of thunder as though the heavens had collapsed was followed by the opening of the church door. There entered a carpenter bearing his tools in a sack on his shoulder. The chaplain advanced, seized the carpenter's hand and expressed his great pleasure that he had come to hear him on such a night.

"I did not come to hear you but to take refuge from the storm," replied the carpenter.

With the carpenter and the minister as his audience the chaplain told his story.

The next day the carpenter called on the minister and said he felt called upon to go to British Columbia and devote his life to the Indians. The minister tried to dissuade him, telling him that he could accomplish nothing and that it would be a useless sacrifice. The carpenter, like Saul of Tarsus, had a vision that would not vanish and unaided he followed its beckoning hand to Fort Simpson.

That carpenter was William Duncan. The colony of Metlakatla is his vision realized.

To the enthusiast this story carries the lesson that no effort is in vain and among all the seeds that are sown under discouragement one will fall on fertile soil and ripen into a harvest without bound.

If anyone has the least doubt as to where Delegate Wickersham stands in regard to Alaska they should read his speech on the Alaska Railroad Bill.

News Items

From Craig

A word or two from this place to the readers of the Sentinel that they may know we are here about too strong and more coming by every boat.

The early part of last week an organization was effected to be known as the Craig Chamber of Commerce with the following officers to serve for one year: Pres.
Frank W. Thompson, Sec. R. B.
Alexander, Vice Pres. A. Z. Doty, Treas. E. Ross, the Executive Committee McMillan, C. A. Fox, F. E. Butler and the President.
Already the committee is rushing matters for the betterment of the town and the West Coast in general.
A petition signed by practically all the people along the Coast as well as numerous personal letters asking for the establishment of a branch office of the U. S.
Cable at this point which is sadly needed and it is the hope of the committee to have it installed by the first of July. We are also asking for the appointment of a Deputy Customs officer here which will be a great benefit to those engaged in marine affairs. The mail service is not what we ought to have so fight, that will be carried to the last ditch, has been inaugurated to secure for us at least a weekly service during the entire year. You can see we are out for the real dope and are going to get pretty nearly what we want, so that within one year from this date we will have laid the foundation and achieved a fair start for a metropolis on the West Coast.

The new school district is now thoroughly organized and only waiting for final inspection from the superintendent of schools to launch a campaign for the education of our children.

The gasoline launch Teddy was here for a day or two. Capt. Hubbard of the firm of Williams and Hubbard, Ketchikan who recently secured the contract for the carrying of mail over the Portage, was securing signatures to a petition asking the government to repair and extend the plank road on either side of the portage and make it of sufficient strength and width to enable them to operate an automobile for the more rapid transporting of the mail, passengers, and freight. There can be no doubt that better service is badly needed.

Judge C. A. Fox has got his eye on the future and is in training for the fall campaign. He is just now very active in securing members of the Democratic Club.

Plans For Salmon Day

If the plans already outlined by the committee on arrangements are accepted as any criterion, Salmon Day 1914 will prove one of the biggest, most comprehensive and effective publicity movements ever undertaken in behalf of a canned food. The happy fact that 1914 is the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the salmon canning industry, has lent unusual impetus to the endeavor and there is every indication that the movement will not only attract greater attention than last year on the Pacific Coast, but that it will become nation-wide in its scope.

March 13 has been established for the celebration of National Salmon Day. It will be so designated by the governors of the coast states and Alaska and the governors of Eastern states are expected to follow suit.

The salmon canners of Alaska and the Northwest will gather at Seattle on Salmon Day and arrangements are now being made for a banquet at which over three hundred covers will be laid. The Oregon-Washington-California Salmon Canners Association is directing activities in the Portland district and is making arrangements for a big gathering and banquet at Portland on Salmon Day.
